ChatGPT-Generated “Red Flags” Artificially Public search content showing “red flags” appearing solely as a result of Watters’ electronic content manipulation and cyber-harassment campaign (Cal. Penal Code § 653.2(a)–(c)(1)–(2)).

 “Red Flags” or Criticisms That Appear in That Public Search Context

From what’s accessible in the public domain (mostly via Watters’s site and the case listing), the main “red flags” or allegations against Parmenter include:

- A claim that Parmenter “should not be practicing law” due to “various issues.”
andrewwatters.com
- Allegations tied to a “timeshare RICO scam,” mentioned in the same context — although the nature of the alleged involvement (direct, indirect, or structural) is unclear. andrewwatters.com
- The availability of a “sample filing” (the PDF) suggests that there may be specific legal or factual claims being advanced by Watters against Parmenter.

Dear Ms. Parmenter,

As you know, Jeramy and I represent the Defendant in this action.

We read your latest filing (reply on motion for reconsideration), and for this and other reasons we have serious concerns about your mental state. Your false statements of fact and your extensive inclusion of absolutely irrelevant matter, such as my lawsuit against Federal prisoner Mahsa Parviz and your claims about how I supposedly practice law, indicate that something is seriously wrong with you.

Mahsa is a nine-time felon who is in prison and is on a harassing crusade against me. I have every right to shame her online in a web page that is 100% true and 100% fair to her. And now I am providing you notice that I am likely going to shame you as well for your lunatic-level behavior.

My Hall of Shame web page about Zheng Liu states that he is "perhaps" the most insane, unfit licensed attorney in California. You are rapidly approaching that level, and I hope you will reconsider while there is still time to avoid having my potential Hall of Shame web page about you being higher-ranked on Google than your own website.

Best,

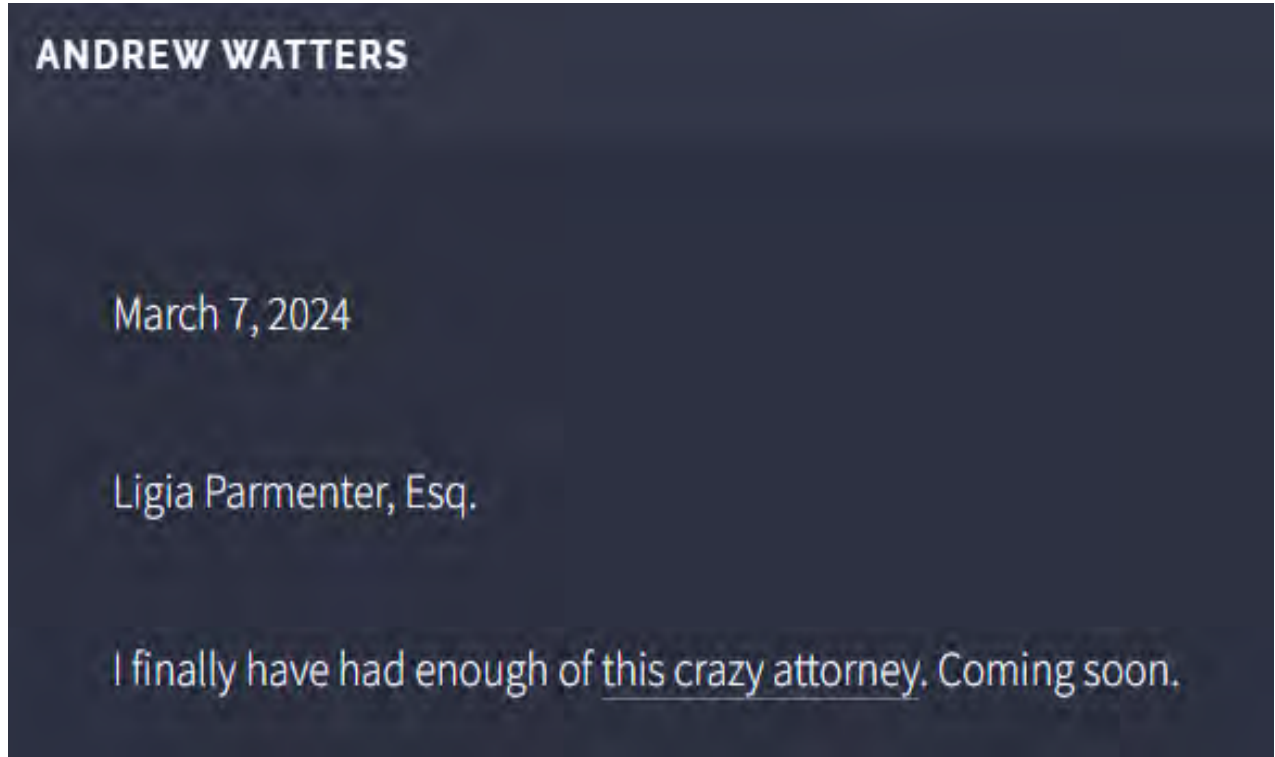

Andrew Watters

Watters' "Personal Conduct" orders targeting attorneys he labels as mentally disabled, including references to mental illness and DSM-5 diagnoses, and threatening professional harm, cross-referenced to his September 19, 2023 extortionate threat letter (Exhibit 2-A), submitted solely to show intimidation, escalation, and Plaintiff's objectively reasonable fear of future harm, not as an independent claim or defamation basis.

Opposing Counsel Personal Conduct Policy

I have my opposing counsel personal conduct policy on my website in order to provide fair warning and also deter bad behavior. My policy is simple and well-known to my usual opposing counsel: I do not communicate by phone or in person with any attorney who (1) reneges on agreements, (2) spouts bullshit in any way, including the creation of false or misleading records, (3) acts shady or manipulative, (4) embarrasses me to my clients, (5) engages in harassment of any kind, or (6) exhibits two or more diagnostic criteria consistent with any known personality disorder, with particular focus on Cluster B personality disorders. This five-item policy is easy to administer and completely fair. Even if your phones are blocked, email may still be available in some scenarios, though I also reserve the right to block opposing counsel individual emails or even entire domains in the event of abuse of the privilege of email. Please be mindful of this policy when communicating with me, as there will be no advance notice or warning and an email block is seriously inconvenient, which is the point. Email is a privilege, not a right. I do not "diagnose" opposing counsel, nor would I presume to do that as a layman even though I frequently refer to the DSM-5 for guidance; I merely observe opposing counsel's actual behavior and proceed accordingly.

Exhibit 3-B— As a result of Defendant Andrew Watters’ sustained cyber-harassment and defamatory online publications, Plaintiff suffered documented psychiatric injuries causing significant emotional distress and functional impact. These injuries led to Plaintiff requiring, and the Superior Court of San Mateo granting, an ADA-based court accommodation to ensure equal access to the judicial process. The accommodation was granted as a direct consequence of the psychiatric harm inflicted by Defendant’s cyber-stalking and defamatory campaign, not due to any actual incapacity to practice law.

November 17, 2025 website update by Watters threatening continued harm and cyber-harassment in retaliation for the Superior Court of San Mateo's grant of an ADA accommodation, submitted to document stalking, retaliation, and Plaintiff's reasonable fear of future intimidation and harm.

EVIDENTIARY PURPOSE AND ANTI-PRIVILEGE CLARIFICATION NOTICE

This exhibit is submitted exclusively to document Plaintiff's reasonable fear of Defendant Andrew Watters' threatened future conduct and intimidation, and not as the basis for any claim arising from this specific "litigation update" language. Defendant Andrew Watters' recent update on November 17, 2025 with the addition of the phrase "frivolous lawsuit" and his reference to an "Anti-SLAPP motion to be decided in late 2025 or early 2026" appears to be a calculated attempt to mislead the Court and the public into perceiving his defamatory webpage as litigation-privileged speech – when it is NOT – this November 17, 2025 statement was only days after Plaintiff received an accommodation from the Superior Court of San Mateo pursuant to the ADA and as a result of the injuries Andrew Watters has inflicted on Plaintiff.

MENU

MY BIO

Hi, my name is Andrew G. Watters. I am a radically honest, category-defying polymath based in Redwood City, California, USA. I am primarily a lawyer, with a law degree from U.C. College of Law San Francisco (formerly known as U.C. Hastings College of Law), a bachelor's degree from UCLA, and twenty years of professional experience. I have had my own practice since 2012, and my own law firm since 2016. I offer legal services, including complex private investigations; and a custom software platform for attorneys called Slash. I am married to Mrs. Right, with whom I welcomed our daughter Jennifer in 2022. My personal trademark is my carbon fiber briefcase from Tecknomonster, a combined aerospace/luggage company. For entertainment purposes, I recently resurrected a popular anonymous discussion board for lawyers called JD Underground, which has been a great diversion from the law firm for me. I also sometimes build computer systems and custom guitars, which I find to be self-actualizing. I am originally from San Francisco, which I always enjoy telling people because Dirty Harry shares my hometown. Finally, like Thanos and Tony Stark, I am cursed with knowledge-- and I try to use this substantial gift for positive things. Still trying to be a moderate Democrat.

San Mateo County Bar Association forced resignation letter dated March 14, 2025, requiring Watters' resignation based on "Hall of Shame" content published on www.andrewwatters.com/hall-of-shame/, confirming the "Hall of Shame" as his principal attorney-advertising feature and not a personal endeavor as Watters attempts to repeatedly misrepresent.

I should note that I also have a Hall of Fame on my website, which features several SMCHA members along with their deserving praise. The intention is to be even-handed, but it seems like I have not succeeded in that effort when I'm being asked to reconsider part of the Hall of Shame because it reflects poorly on the Bar Association.

I have carefully thought about the options here in terms of the way forward, and I'm not seeing any besides (1) resign from my leadership role, or (2) remove Judge Cadet's Hall of Shame page, because that is obviously the offending page.

My bottom line is that I do not censor my 100% fair and 100% accurate online opinions for any reason, especially when I feel like the information should be public because it is important for litigants to know. I continue to receive numerous calls and emails supporting the Hall of Shame each month— not just about Judge Cadet, but about others who appear there. The page about Judge Cadet has become a repository of information from dissatisfied litigants and attorneys, all of which have only found this resource because it is available online.

\ Highlighting (if any) added for the Court's convenience only; the underlying screenshot is a true and correct copy and has not been altered in substance.*

Unfortunately, I cannot accommodate your request to remove any portion of the Hall of Shame, and I'm willing to give up my section chair role to prove that I care more about the principle of free speech than the many professional or networking benefits that might accrue from continuing the role. I also don't want to set a precedent that I'm willing to edit my Hall of Shame on my personal website under the auspices of it reflecting poorly on the Bar Association.

Accordingly, I am tendering my resignation as section chair unless there is a different solution the Board would prefer. The upcoming event can be canceled considering there are no attendees.

Best,

Andrew Waterson

Update March 14, 2025: I haven't had time to update this, but I will add an important development: I was recently forced to resign as section chair of the Intellectual Property and Technology section of the local bar association because of this page. They knew the I.P./Technology Section was something I really wanted to do and that I had big plans for, and they pressured me to remove Judge Cadet's page because it allegedly reflects poorly on the bar association to have a section leader expressing these concerns about a judge in the area. Here is my email to the association leadership in response:

Dear Deborah and Alma,

Thank you very much for stopping by this morning to discuss the future of the SMCBA I.P./Technology section in the context of my online Hall of Shame, which features a local judge and several attorneys.

I should note that I also have a Hall of Fame on my website, which features several SMCBA members along with their deserving praise. The intention is to be even-handed, but it seems like I have not succeeded in that effort when I'm being asked to reconsider part of the Hall of Shame because it reflects poorly on the Bar Association.

RE: Clinical Summary

To Whom It May Concern,

I am writing to provide a clinical summary of my assessment of Ligia Parmenter, a [REDACTED] year-old Hispanic female attorney who presented for evaluation following significant emotional distress related to a cyber-harassment defamation incident. The client has been a licensed attorney since 1995 and has maintained a successful legal career for three decades. Her symptoms began in June-July 2024 after discovering a defamatory website created by a colleague, which contained false statements about her. She reports this incident as traumatic, especially as these statements, which include that she is a criminal, appear prominently on major search-engines when her name is searched on a 24/7 basis.

Ligia currently endorses severe anxiety and depressive symptoms, including persistent sadness, intrusive worry, hypervigilance, rumination about how others perceive her, diminished appetite, loss of interest in previously enjoyed activities, and chronic sleep disruption marked by nocturnal panic episodes. She also reports significant occupational impairment, noting that tasks previously completed in a few hours now require several days due to excessive checking behaviors and intense fear of making errors. She describes emotional exhaustion and burnout.

Ligia's symptoms have strained her family relationships and reduced her ability to fulfill caregiving responsibilities for her elderly [REDACTED]. While [REDACTED] remain supportive, they have expressed emotional fatigue in response to her distress. Ligia avoids disclosing her symptoms to avoid burdening them.

Standardized assessments were administered. She scored 21 on the PHQ-9 (severe depression) and 21 on the GAD-7 (severe generalized anxiety). Her MoCA score was 30/30, indicating intact cognitive functioning and supporting that her functional impairments stem from emotional distress rather than cognitive decline.

Based on the evaluation, Ligia meets criteria for Adjustment Disorder with Mixed Anxiety and Depressed Mood (F43.23). Her symptoms are directly linked to the traumatic nature of the defamation incident and have resulted in substantial impairment across occupational, relational, emotional, and caregiving domains.

Please feel free to contact me if additional information or clarification is required.

Sincerely,

Psychological Assessment

Name: Ligia Parmenter

DOB: [REDACTED]

Presenting Problem

Client is a [REDACTED] Hispanic female attorney seeking services due to significant distress following ongoing incidents of cyber-harassment and defamation by another lawyer. Client reports that the other lawyer created a website specifically intended to discredit and demean her character, including false statements referring to her as “crazy attorney,” “batshit-insane,” and a criminal “RICO” violator in “Mexico” and that “she should not be practicing law.”

Client reports symptoms of anxiety, depressive distress, and hypervigilance. She reports persistent sadness and recurrent thoughts about whether others view her as “crazy.” She states she sought medical care and was prescribed medication to help manage her heightened anxiety. Client describes notable sleep disturbances, including difficulty falling asleep due to prolonged rumination, waking multiple times throughout the night, and experiencing nocturnal panic episodes that begin in her stomach and move to her chest. She reports intrusive thoughts throughout the day, fear that something bad may happen, and a pervasive sense of being scared and on high alert.

Client expresses concern that judges or opposing counsel may be “judging me,” and reports feeling helpless. Additional symptoms include reduced appetite and anhedonia around eating, sometimes skipping meals altogether, persistent stress, and excessive worry about the harm caused to her and her reputation.

Client also reports significant occupational impairment. She describes heightened hypervigilance and a need to “triple check” her work, leading to emotional exhaustion and burnout. Tasks that previously took approximately four hours, such as accounting responsibilities, now take her two to three days due to fear of making even minor mistakes and ongoing mental preoccupation with the situation.

These circumstances have significantly affected her capacity to engage in her usual caregiving responsibilities.

Social Relationships & Support System

Client reports avoiding discussing her current stressors with others due to concern about burdening them. She intentionally refrains from sharing details with her [REDACTED], noting that they would become distressed. ## Previous Treatment & Psychiatric Hospitalizations

Client reports that she has never in her life had any mental health conditions of “mental deficiency” or “mental instability” issues and never had to take any medications to deal with stress or any mental and emotional concerns until this matter arose.

Psychometric Measures

Patient Health Questionnaire – 9 (PHQ-9)

- Score: 21
- Interpretation: Severe Depression
- A PHQ-9 score of 21 falls in the severe depression range. This indicates:
  - Near-daily depressive symptoms
  - Marked loss of interest/pleasure
  - Significant sleep disturbance
  - Daytime fatigue and low motivation
  - Difficulty concentrating
  - Appetite disturbance
  - Feelings of sadness, guilt, or emotional overwhelm
  - High likelihood of functional impairment across multiple settings
- Given the clinical presentation, this score is consistent with the client's significant sadness, anhedonia, poor sleep, reduced appetite, burnout, and withdrawal from normal activities.

Generalized Anxiety Disorder – 7 (GAD-7)

- Score: 21
- Interpretation: Severe Generalized Anxiety
- A GAD-7 score of 21 reflects severe anxiety, the highest range possible. This indicates:
  - Persistent and uncontrollable worry
  - Physiological anxiety symptoms such as chest tightness, stomach anxiety, or panic episodes
  - Feeling constantly “on edge” or hyperalert
  - Difficulty relaxing
  - Racing thoughts and intrusive worry

- Anticipatory anxiety or fear that something bad may happen
  - Significant distress and impairment
- This score strongly aligns with the client's reported hypervigilance, intrusive thoughts, panic episodes, anticipatory fear, and pervasive worry about being judged by colleagues, judges, or the community.

Montreal Cognitive Assessment (MoCA)

- Score: 30/30
- Interpretation: Intact Cognitive Functioning
- A perfect MoCA score shows:
  - No evidence of neurocognitive impairment
  - Cognitive domains (memory, attention, executive function, language, visuospatial skills) are functioning normally
  - Cognitive difficulties described by the client (e.g., slowed work pace, difficulty focusing) are most likely secondary to emotional distress, not cognitive decline
- This result supports the interpretation that depression, anxiety, and trauma-related stress—not a neurological condition—are responsible for her concentration and efficiency problems.

Functional Impairments

Occupational & Professional Functioning

- Significant decline in work efficiency and productivity, as evidenced by tasks that previously took four hours now requiring two to three days due to hypervigilance, fear of errors, and compulsive “triple checking.”
- Difficulty concentrating and sustaining attention due to intrusive thoughts, persistent worry, and ongoing rumination related to the defamation incident.
- Increased emotional exhaustion and burnout, impacting her ability to maintain her usual professional standards.
- Heightened fear of negative evaluation by judges, colleagues, or opposing counsel, impairing her confidence and professional presence.

Daily Living and Routine Functioning

- Reduced participation in previously enjoyed activities, such as shopping or leisure activities, indicating impairment in engagement in daily life.
- Disrupted sleep patterns, including difficulty falling asleep, frequent awakenings, and nocturnal panic episodes, contributing to daytime fatigue and cognitive inefficiency.
- Decreased appetite and irregular eating patterns, sometimes skipping meals entirely, suggesting impaired self-care.

Social and Interpersonal Functioning

- Withdrawal from social interactions due to fear of burdening others and avoidance of discussing distressing events.
- Strained family dynamics: [REDACTED] supportive, [REDACTED] expressed fatigue arising from stress and secondary trauma of observing the severe emotional and psychological injury caused to [REDACTED] ongoing matter.
- Limited emotional availability for [REDACTED] extended family due to preoccupation with stressors.

Caretaking Responsibilities

- Reduced capacity to fulfill caregiving roles, including decreased visits to her [REDACTED] and her [REDACTED] nursing home.
- Emotional burnout impacting ability to provide consistent support, which has secondary emotional consequences for her [REDACTED], who rely solely on her for visitation.

Psychological and Emotional Functioning

- Persistent anxiety, hypervigilance, and intrusive thoughts, impairing her ability to regulate emotions throughout the day.
- Panic attacks that interfere with daily functioning and sleep.
- Depressive symptoms, including sadness, anhedonia, decreased motivation, and hopelessness.
- Trauma-related distress, as client identifies the cyber-harassment and defamation incident as a traumatic experience with ongoing psychological impact.

Overall Quality of Life

- Marked reduction in well-being, including diminished joy, increased fearfulness, and pervasive stress.
- Compromised ability to maintain balance between work, family, and self-care, resulting in significant functional decline across multiple areas of life.

Mental Status Exam

Affect: Anxious, tearful at times, with constricted range.

Mood: Self-reported sadness, fearfulness, and emotional exhaustion.

Thought Content: Intrusive thoughts related to defamation, fear of judgment by colleagues and judiciary, catastrophic thinking, and excessive worry.

Sleep: Fragmented with frequent awakenings and panic episodes.

Cognition: Concentration impaired by rumination and hypervigilance; slowed task completion.

Insight/Judgment: Good insight into distress but difficulty regulating emotional response.

Behavior: Social withdrawal, avoidance of discussing stressors, reduced engagement in previously enjoyed activities.

Diagnosis

Client's symptoms emerged in direct temporal relation to an identifiable psychosocial stressor (defamation and harassment), with no evidence of an alternative precipitating event. The symptom profile includes persistent worry, hypervigilance, intrusive distress, sadness, sleep disturbance, appetite disruption, impaired concentration, panic episodes, and notable functional decline across occupational, social, and caregiving domains.

This constellation is most consistent with Adjustment Disorder with Mixed Anxiety and Depressed Mood (F43.23), given:

- Clear precipitating stressor
- Emotional and behavioral symptoms disproportionate to the stressor
- Significant impairment without meeting full criteria for a primary mood or anxiety disorder
- Symptoms occurring within a few months of the stressor and persisting as the stressor continues

The presence of trauma-like responses (intrusive thoughts, hyperarousal, and panic) suggests the need to monitor for a trauma- and stressor-related disorder; however, symptom presentation currently remains most aligned with Adjustment Disorder.

Clinical Summary

The client is experiencing significant psychological distress and functional decline secondary to a targeted cyber-harassment and defamation incident. The clinical picture is marked by heightened anxiety, depressive affect, fear of judgment, hypervigilance, sleep disturbance, appetite changes, panic symptoms, and impairment in occupational and interpersonal functioning. Her symptoms meet criteria for a trauma- and stressor-related condition, predominantly consistent with Adjustment Disorder. Continued therapeutic intervention is warranted to address emotional regulation, cognitive distortions, trauma responses, and restoration of functioning.

Treatment Plan

1. Symptom Reduction

- Utilize Cognitive Behavioral Therapy (CBT) to address maladaptive thoughts, rumination, and hypervigilance related to perceived negative evaluation and ongoing legal stress.
- Incorporate grounding strategies and coping skills to manage panic episodes and intrusive thoughts.

2. Trauma-Informed Interventions

- Explore and process the traumatic impact of the defamation incident using trauma-focused modalities as appropriate (e.g., narrative exposure, ACT-based acceptance strategies, or EMDR referral if indicated).
- Support client in developing a coherent narrative of the incident that reduces emotional intensity.

3. Sleep and Somatic Regulation

- Implement sleep hygiene strategies and relaxation techniques to reduce night-time rumination and panic-related awakenings.
- Introduce breathing exercises, progressive muscle relaxation, or mindfulness-based approaches to regulate somatic anxiety.
